

Chicago Style

The University of Chicago Press presents two systems of documentation. This chapter shows the notes-and-bibliography system, which calls for (1) a superscript number for each in-text citation, (2) a correspondingly numbered footnote or endnote, and (3) an end-of-paper bibliography. The models in this chapter draw on The Chicago Manual of Style, 16th edition (2010) and Kate L. Turabian's A Manual for Writers of Research Papers, Theses, and Dissertations, 8th edition (2013). Additional information about CMS style is available at www.chicagomanualofstyle.org.

SOURCES NOT COVERED BY CHICAGO 220Formatting a Paper 220*Sample Pages 222

Throughout this chapter, you'll find models that are color-coded to help you see how writers include source information in their notes and bibliographies: brown for author or editor, yellow for title, gray for publication information: place of publication, publisher, date of publication, page number(s), and so on.

CMS-a Documenting with Notes and Bibliography

Put a superscript number in your text to indicate to your reader that you are citing material from a source. The superscript should follow the QUOTATION, PARAPHRASE, or SUMMARY of the source you are citing, as in the example below.

IN-TEXT CITATION

Kaplan insists that understanding power in the Near East requires "Western leaders who know when to intervene, and do so without illusions."¹

The superscript number directs your reader to a footnote or an endnote that gives more information about the source; these in-text references are numbered sequentially throughout your text. Here is the note that documents the quote from Kaplan's book.

NOTE WHEN YOU FIRST CITE A SOURCE

1. Robert D. Kaplan, Eastward to Tartary: Travels in the Balkans, the Middle East, and the Caucasus (New York: Random House, 2000), 330.

If you cite the same source later in your paper, give a shorter form of the note that lists just the author's last name, an abbreviated title, and the page(s) cited.

SUBSEQUENT NOTES

4. Kaplan, Eastward, 332.

If you cite the same source in two consecutive notes, simply change the page number in the second note and use Ibid., a Latin abbreviation meaning "in the same place." When your next citation is to the same page of that source, use just Ibid.

5. Ibid., 334.

6. Ibid.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

The bibliography at the end of your paper is an alphabetical list of the sources you've cited or consulted. Here is how Kaplan's book would appear in a bibliography.

Kaplan, Robert D. Eastward to Tartary: Travels in the Balkans, the Middle East, and the Caucasus. New York: Random House, 2000.

If your bibliography includes all of the works referenced in the notes, Chicago suggests providing only brief notes. Check your instructor's preference, however, before using this method.

CMS-b Note and Bibliography Models

Because Chicago style requires both notes and a bibliography for documentation, this chapter provides examples of both methods. See p. 222 for guidelines on preparing notes and a bibliography; for samples, see pp. 225–26.

Print Books

For most books, you'll need to provide information about the author; the title and any subtitle; and the place of publication, publisher, and year of publication. Treat pamphlets and brochures like books, giving whatever information is available.

IMPORTANT DETAILS FOR DOCUMENTING PRINT BOOKS

- AUTHORS: Include the author's middle name or initial, if any.
- TITLES: Capitalize the first and last words and all principal words of titles and subtitles. Italicize book titles. Use quotation marks around titles of chapters or other short works within books.
- PUBLICATION PLACE: If there's more than one city, use only the first. If a city may be unfamiliar or could be confused with another of the same name, give the state, province, or country. For the U.S.

capital, use “Washington, DC.” Do not list the state or country if that information is part of the publisher’s name.

- PUBLISHER: Omit The at the start of a publisher’s name, along with abbreviations such as Inc. If you shorten a publisher’s name (e.g., Wiley for John Wiley), be consistent.

If you include more than one work by the same author, give the author’s name in the first entry, and then use a long dash (three-em dash or six hyphens) in the author slot for each of the subsequent works, listing them alphabetically by the first important word of each title.

Print Periodicals

For most articles, you'll need to list the author; the article title and any subtitle; the periodical title; volume and issue numbers (for journals); and date information. Include page references only for journals and magazines.

IMPORTANT DETAILS FOR DOCUMENTING PRINT PERIODICALS

- AUTHORS: If there is more than one author, follow the models for a book with multiple authors (see no. 2).
- TITLES: Capitalize article titles and subtitles as you would a work in an edited collection (see no. 6). Use quotation marks around article titles. Italicize periodical titles.
- VOLUME, ISSUE, AND DATE: Give Arabic numbers for the volume even if a journal uses roman numerals. If an issue number is given, there's no need to include the month or season in your documentation. Magazines and newspapers are documented by date only.
- PAGES: Notes for journal and magazine articles need a specific page number; notes for newspapers do not. For the bibliography, give the full page range for journal and magazine articles that are paged consecutively; omit this information for newspapers and for magazines articles that include pages that continue at the back of an issue.

Online Sources

Documentation for many online sources begins with the same elements you'd provide for a print source: author or editor; title of the work; publisher, place of publication, periodical title, publication date, and so on. Provide a DOI (Digital Object Identifier, a string of numbers that identifies an online document) or URL whenever possible. For websites you'll also need to include the site's title, sponsor, and a URL.

IMPORTANT DETAILS FOR DOCUMENTING ONLINE SOURCES

- AUTHORS: When no person or separate organization is given as the author of a website, list the site's sponsor as the author. If there is more than one author, list subsequent authors as you would for a book with multiple authors (see no. 2).
- PAGES OR OTHER LOCATORS: When an online book or journal article has no page numbers, you may give another locator such as a paragraph number or subsection heading. Be sure to make it clear (with an abbreviation such as par., for example) that the locator you cite is not a page number. See no. 25 (pp. 213, 215) for an example that uses part and chapter headings as a locator.
- ACCESS DATES: Chicago requires access dates only when a publication or revision date cannot be determined, or when a source is likely to be updated or removed without notice. However, some instructors require access dates for online sources, so most of the following models include them.
- DOI OR URL: Chicago prefers DOIs to URLs, as DOIs apply to a work in any medium. If no DOI is readily available, use the URL that appears in your browser's address bar; a shorter form (known as a stable URL) is also acceptable if supplied with the work. Break a DOI or URL that won't fit on one line after a colon or a double slash (//), before a slash or other punctuation mark, or to either side of an equals sign or an ampersand—and do not add a hyphen or break the URL at one.

Title of Article

The completion of the transcontinental railroad in 1869 was a major event in California history. The iron horse linked California with the rest of the nation and ushered in an era of economic consolidation. The Californians who controlled this new technology became the wealthiest and most powerful men of their generation. The railroad also stirred intense controversy. It was denounced by its opponents as a grasping and greedy octopus.

Sources Not Covered by Chicago

To document a source for which Chicago does not provide guidelines, look for models similar to the source you have cited. Give any information readers will need in order to find your source themselves—author; title; publisher; date of publication; information about electronic retrieval (such as the URL and date of access); and any other pertinent information. You might want to try out your reference note yourself, to be sure it will lead others to your source.

CMS-c Formatting a Paper

Name, course, title. Type the title of your paper about one-third of the way down the page; capitalize it as you would the title of a book. Place your name several lines below the title, along with information such as the title of your course, your instructor's name, and the date. Center each element on the title page on a separate line.

Page numbers. Number all pages consecutively, but do not put a page number on the title page. If your instructor asks you to include your name, the date, or draft number alongside the page number, place the page number and this information in either the upper-right-hand or bottom-right-hand corner of the page; if all you need is a page number, you may also follow this setup or simply center it at the top or bottom of the page.

Spacing and margins. Double-space the main text of the paper. Block quotations, table titles, and captions should be single spaced. Footnotes, endnotes, and the bibliography should also be single spaced, but with an extra line space between each item (see examples on pp. 225–26). Set one-inch margins on all sides.

Long quotations. When quoting five or more lines or two or more paragraphs, set off the quotation as a block, indenting it one-half inch (or five spaces) from the left margin. Single-space the quotation and add an extra line space above and below it. Block quotations should not be enclosed in quotation marks.

Bruce Catton describes the end of the U.S. Civil War:

The end of the war was like the beginning, with the army marching down the open road under the spring sky, seeing a far light on the horizon. Many lights had died in the windy dark but far down the road there was always a gleam, and it was as if a legend had been created to express some obscure truth that could not otherwise be stated. Everything had changed, the war and the men and the land they fought for, but the road ahead had not changed. It went on through the trees and past the little towns and over the hills, and there was no getting to the end of it.¹

Poetry should be set off when you're quoting two or more lines.

By referring to him as both "Captain" and "father," Walt Whitman makes clear the strong sense of identification he has felt with the now-fallen Lincoln:

My Captain does not answer, his lips are pale and still,
My father does not feel my arm, he has no pulse nor will.²

Illustrations. You may wish to include figures and tables. Figures include charts, diagrams, graphs, maps, photographs, and other illustrations. Figures and tables should be numbered and given a title (Figure 1. A Map of Columbus, Ohio, 2010; Table 1. Telephone Ownership, 1900–20). Any illustration that comes from another source should include documentation—Source: David Siegel, Creating Killer Web Sites (Indianapolis, IN: Hayden Books, 1996), 72. If you’ve created the illustration yourself with data from another source, add “Data from” before the author’s name. Put the title above the illustration and any source note below. Position illustrations as soon as possible after they are discussed in your text—and be sure to explain how they relate to your point.

Notes. You may choose to give notes as footnotes at the bottom of the page on which you cite the source or as endnotes that are grouped at the end of your text under the heading Notes. For both footnotes and endnotes, indent the first line one-half inch (five spaces); do not indent subsequent lines. Footnotes and endnotes should be single-spaced with an extra line between notes.

Bibliography. Start your list on a new page at the end of your paper, following any notes. Center the heading. Single-space each entry and leave a line space between entries. Each entry should begin at the left margin, and subsequent lines should be indented one-half inch (or five spaces). Alphabetize the list by authors’ or editors’ last names; for works with no author or editor, or for multiple works by the same author, use the first important words of titles. If you include multiple works by the same author, use a three-em dash (or six hyphens) in place of the author’s name in every entry after the first.

In the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea, many Victorian houses remain standing, for this part of London was favored by many artists of the day. Two of these buildings have since become museums: Leighton House, home to Frederic Lord Leighton, P.R.A., and Linley Sambourne House, residence of the premier cartoonist for Punch magazine and his family. Though managed by the same team of curators and staff, the houses have distinct characters, which stem from the finery of their interiors: Sambourne House sports almost entirely original furnishings and decor, while Leighton House has been painstakingly restored to its intended grandeur as a "palace of art."

But although it might not be apparent to an average visitor overwhelmed by these displays, both museums are unavoidably involved in the fierce debate that surrounds all sites that present "the past." This debate is multifaceted, but all strands return eventually to the issue of whether or not such presentations can educate the visitor—the key role of the museum. As museum-

studies scholar Eilean Hooper-Greenhill observes, "Knowledge is now well understood as the commodity that museums offer."¹ The details of this knowledge vary by museum; we will here be focusing on the transmission of historical knowledge. The history museum, however, has an interesting place in the discourse on museum education, for not everyone accepts that these institutions fulfill their didactic role. The accusation runs that some history museums have abandoned their educational duties by moving beyond the glass case format to display history in context through reconstruction, preservation, and, most feared of all, living history
